

Brexit and the future EU-UK relationship: The US business view

The implications of Brexit could be far-reaching for US companies – who have a huge footprint in the EU and the UK. That's why we want the best possible outcome for all involved.

Why does Brexit matter for US business?

60%

of all US FDI goes to Europe- a quarter of which flows
to the UK

The UK has long served as a launchpad for US operations to the rest of the EU

US investment is driven by the benefits of the EU Single Market

How

should the negotiations be conducted?

During this process, we are calling for:

A constructive and long-term approach from all parties Transparency and opportunities for business input

Transitional arrangements to provide certainty for companies and to limit disruption

Our vision

The EU and the UK are highly integrated and we want this to continue in the future.

Our 5 key principles for the new EU-UK relationship

A new relationship that builds on the deep economic links between the EU and the UK

Full access for companies to the EU and UK markets

Continued cooperation on rules and regulations

Access to the right skills and talent for businesses

A strong Europe and a strengthened EU Single
Market
